Election/Restriction

Introduction

1. The following is an election/restriction in response to the communications received on January 25, 2002. Claims 1-22 are restricted in this action.
2. Restriction to one of the following inventions is required under 35 U.S.C. 121:
 - I. Claims 1-8, drawn to an exception processing and prevention method, classified in class 705, subclass 7.
 - II. Claims 9-14, drawn to an exception analysis method, classified in class 705, subclass 7.
 - III. Claims 15-22, drawn to an exception prediction method, classified in class 705, subclass 7.

Inventions I and II are related as combination and subcombination. Inventions in this relationship are distinct if it can be shown that (1) the combination as claimed does not require the particulars of the subcombination as claimed for patentability, and (2) that the subcombination has utility by itself or in other combinations (MPEP § 806.05(c)). In the instant case, the combination as claimed does not require the particulars of the subcombination as claimed because the exception processing method can perform the exception analysis in alternative methods and steps than those listed in the subcombination. The subcombination has separate utility such as an exception analysis method. Because the combination (group I) does not require the particularities of the subcombination (group II) in that alternative steps can be taken for exception analysis and the subcombination (group II) has utility by itself as a method for exception analysis, restriction is deemed proper between groups I and II.

Inventions I and III are related as combination and subcombination. Inventions in this relationship are distinct if it can be shown that (1) the combination as claimed does not require the particulars of the subcombination as claimed for patentability, and (2) that the subcombination has utility by itself or in other combinations (MPEP § 806.05(c)). In the instant case, the combination as claimed does not require the particulars of the subcombination as claimed because the exception processing method can perform the exception prediction in alternative methods and steps than those listed in the subcombination. The subcombination has separate utility such as an exception prediction method. Because the combination (group I) does not require the particularities of the subcombination (group III) in that alternative steps can be taken for exception prediction and the subcombination (group III) has utility by itself as a method for exception prediction, restriction is deemed proper between groups I and III.

Inventions II and III are related as subcombinations disclosed as usable together in a single combination. The subcombinations are distinct if they do not overlap in scope and are not obvious variants, and if it is shown that at least one subcombination is separately usable. In the instant case, the disclosed subcombinations have separate utilities. Subcombination I (group II) has separate utility as an exception analysis method. Subcombination II (group III) has separate utility as an exception prediction method. See MPEP § 806.05(d).

Because these inventions are distinct for the reasons given above and have acquired a separate status in the art because of their recognized divergent subject matter, restriction for examination purposes as indicated is proper.

Should applicant traverse on the ground that the species are not patentably distinct, applicant should submit evidence or identify such evidence now of record showing the species to be obvious variants or clearly admit on the record that this is the case. In either instance, if the examiner finds one of the inventions unpatentable over the prior art, the evidence or admission may be used in a rejection under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) of the other invention.

Applicant is advised that the reply to this requirement to be complete must include an election of the invention to be examined even though the requirement be traversed (37 CFR 1.143).

Applicant is advised that the reply to this requirement to be complete must include an election of the invention to be examined even though the requirement be traversed (37 CFR 1.143).

Any inquiry concerning this communication or earlier communications from the examiner should be directed to Kalyan K. Deshpande whose telephone number is (571) 272-5880. The examiner can normally be reached on M-F 8am-5pm.
